The mystery of the "Actes des apôtres" has been ascribed to Arnoul and Simon Gréban as joint authors, and also to Jean du Prier. It is probable, according to the author of this work, that the existing text is by Simon Gréban, assisted, possibly, by his brother Arnoul; and that Jean du Prier made an adaptation of it. cf. Introd., p. [vii]; Conclusion, p. 228.

... The Baumes law, compiled by Julia E. Johnsen. New York, The H. W. Wilson company, 1929.

"The Baumes laws were adopted by the state Legislature of New York through the recommendation of the New York state Crime commission ... which commission was instituted in 1926 for the purpose of inquiring into the crime situation in the state and suggesting measures for dealing with it. This Baumes commission ... secured the adoption of the first twenty 'Baumes laws' in 1926, and ... additional legislation in 1927, 1928 and the current year ... Specific interest has centered, however, in the drastic provisions applying to persons convicted of habitual felonies, and the designation 'the Baumes law' has become most specifically associated with the mandatory life imprisonment act for offenders convicted of a fourth felony."—Introd.
